Buddy Guide

What is a buddy?

As part of Red Hat's internship programme, each student will be allocated a buddy. A buddy is an experienced team member who will be able to provide training, instruction and leadership for the student. The student-buddy system is a two-way relationship. It is up to the buddy and the student how that relationship is built. This is only a guideline which specifies what is expected of you as a buddy or as a student to ensure that both individuals will have a smooth and pleasant experience during the duration of the internship.

What is expected of you as a buddy

- Be friendly and welcoming
- Get to know the student you're partnered up with
- Be ready to answer queries that the student may have and encourage the student to ask questions
- Provide constructive feedback
- Maintain constant communication
- Knowledge share

What is expected of you as a student

- Be open! Don't hesitate to contribute or share any ideas, feedback or knowledge that you have with your buddy
